Intraday Commentary From Jim Bianco

Wall Street is really good at (over)analyzing symptoms, while not recognizing the causes. The banking system "cause" is a liquidity squeeze. The symptom is credit announcements that bother the markets.

I try to explain this in today's lead post.

While there was no borrowing for the standing Repo Facility this morning, SOFR did make a new 5-year high yesterday. The last time SOFR traded 30 bps above RRP was March 17, 2020. (Exceptions are month and year-end, when it regularly spikes for window-dressing purposes.) We are not at a month or year-end now.

Here is a short-term look.

Comparing Overnight SOFR Rates to the Fed's Repo Rates

Bad news ... Funding markets are still stressed.
 Good news ... The stress did not worsen today.
